STATISTICS ON RECENT VOCATIONS TO RELIGIOUS LIFE AND THE PRIESTHOOD

The majority of women’s and men’s communities have at least one person in initial formation

- Since 2009, the majority of religious institutes have at least one person in formation: 66 percent of women’s institutes and 80 percent of men’s institutes.
- Since 2000, 93 percent of all religious institutes have had at least one serious inquirer and 79 percent of all religious institutes have had at least one formal applicant since 2000.

Characteristics of ordinands and those newly professed to religious life

AGE

Average age for discernment is 19 and for entrance 28
- The average age a person first considers a vocation to religious life is 19 years of age, fluctuating between 17-20 years of age. Half are 18 or younger when they first considered a vocation.
- The average age of entrance to religious life is 28. Additionally, almost half are 25 years old or younger.
- The average age of women and men making perpetual profession is 41 years old (39 for women and 43 for men). The majority of those professing final vows are under age 36.
- The average age of responding diocesan ordinands at ordination is 33. In the Ordination Class of 2017, only two men were over the age of 60.
- Religious institutes that sponsor vocation promotion and vocation discernment programs directed toward college students and young adults are more likely to have new members than those who do not sponsor programs for these age groups.

ETHNICITY

More diverse, reflecting the increasing diversity in the U.S. Catholic population as a whole
- Among those professing final vows in 2017, 64 percent are Caucasian/European American/White; 18 percent are Asian/Pacific Islander/Native Hawaiian; 11 percent Hispanic/Latino(a); 4 percent are African/African American/black; and 1 percent self-identify as other. No one self-identified as Native American.
- More than six in ten institutes report having at least one entrant in the past ten years born outside the U.S. Institutes of men are particularly likely to have had someone from outside the U.S. enter in the last ten years.
- Among the challenges for integrating new members into institutes are isolation, age gaps, language and communication skills, difficulties with the regulations of Immigration and Naturalizations Services, and a lack of understanding of each other’s culture.
- The majority (80 percent) of those entering religious life were born in the United States. From those who were born outside the United States, women and men self-identified 23 different countries of origin, with the most frequently mentioned country of birth is Vietnam and Mexico.

EDUCATION

The majority of those entering religious life are highly educated
- The majority of those entering religious life attend public schools and universities, yet compared to the national average, they are more likely than other U.S. Catholics to attend Catholic schools and universities. Thirteen percent report being home schooled at some time in their educational background.
VOCATIONAL DISCERNMENT

In 2017, 3,942 discerners created profiles through the NRVC's Vocation Match service.

DEMOGRAPHICS

- 66 percent are under 30
  - (25 percent men; 41 percent women)
- 22 percent are in college
- 41 percent have a college degree
- 80 percent are U.S. citizens
- 27 percent have educational debt
- 62 percent attended Catholic school

DESIRED VOCATION

- 33 percent drawn to apostolic/evangelical communities
- 30 percent drawn to missionary communities
- 21 percent drawn to monastic communities
- 17 percent drawn to cloistered/semi-cloistered communities

NRVC’s VISION Vocation Guide and VocationNetwork.org are the most comprehensive resources available for those discerning a religious vocation with articles on prayer, discernment, community life, and the call to religious life and interactive features, such as Community Search, Vocation Calendar, and Vocation Match.

MISSION OF NRVC

The National Religious Vocation Conference is a professional organization of vocation ministers that presents religious life as a viable option in the Catholic Church. NRVC promotes vocation awareness, invitation, and discernment to life as a religious sister, brother, or priest. NRVC reflects all forms of religious life and offers its members educational opportunities, resources, and other supportive services for spiritual, professional, and personal growth.

- Among those entering religious life, 73 percent earned an undergraduate or graduate degree before entering (up from 70 percent in 2009). Among those entering seminary 60 percent earned at least a bachelor's degree before entering. Religious ordinands were more likely than diocesan ordinands to have an undergraduate degree (60 percent compared to 38 percent).
- Among religious institutes, 54 percent have at least one member working on a college campus. Such a presence is wise considering the number of entrants with undergraduate degrees.
- The impact of educational debt upon entrance to religious life is still an issue for some entrants. The average length of time required to pay off educational debt before entrance is four years and the average amount of educational debt is $29,100. The National Fund for Catholic Religious Vocations has assisted candidates with educational debt since 2015. For more information, go to NFCRV.org.

PARISH LIFE

The majority participated in parish ministry prior to entering formation; World Youth Day influence

- Women and men are equally likely to have served in parish ministry. The most common ministry experience prior to entrance in order is: lector, catechetical ministry, altar server, extraordinary minister of the Eucharist, and music ministry. Before entering, 53 percent participated in college campus ministry, 46 percent in high school ministry, and 40 percent in young adult ministry.
- Before entering religious life or the seminary, one in six participated in World Youth Day. Women were three times more likely than men to have participated in World Youth Day.

FAMILY SUPPORT AND COMMUNITY INFLUENCE

Entrants significantly influenced by a sense of call, example, encouragement of family and others, internet searches

- Only 24 percent of mothers and 17 percent of fathers encouraged their son or daughter to consider a vocation to religious life prior to entering. They are most likely encouraged by members of their religious institutes. Potential ordinands received slightly more encouragement with 40 percent of mothers and 32 percent of fathers encouraging ordinands to consider priesthood before entering the seminary.
- Families have misconceptions and worries about vocations, such as concerns that their child/sibling may be lonely, overworked, or unable to be with family. The 2015 NRVC/CARA Study on the Role of the Family outlines ways families can support vocation discernment.
- Thirty-four percent of women and 27 percent of men entering religious life have a relative who is a priest or religious brother or sister, or nun.
- Spirituality, mission of a religious institute, and the example of professed members “very much” attract newer members to their respective religious institute, followed by the prayer life and community life.
- For members of the Entrance Class of 2017 most men (49 percent) first became acquainted to their religious institute through an institution where members serve while most women (39 %) first became acquainted through the recommendation of a friend or advisor. Internet searches by 35 percent of men and 30 percent of women were the third highest way an entrant first became acquainted to their religious institute.
- Although Catholics do not typically see it as their role to encourage vocations, women and men are nearly twice as likely to consider a vocation when encouraged by another person. The effect is additive. People who are encouraged by three persons are five times more likely to consider a vocation than someone who was not encouraged by anyone.

Sources:

2017 USCCB/CARA Ordination Class Report and Profession Class Report and prior year reports
2017 CARA Study of Women and Men Entering Religious Life: The Entrance Class of 2017 and prior years
2015 NRVC/CARA Study on the Role of the Family in Nurturing Vocations to Religious Life
2014 NRVC/CARA Study on Incorporating Cultural Diversity in Religious Life
2012 USCCB/CARA Study on the Consideration of Priesthood and Religious Life among Never-married Catholics
2012 NRVC/CARA Study on Educational Debt and Vocations to Religious Life
2009 NRVC/CARA Study on Recent Vocations to Religious Life

NRVC is committed to providing accurate vocation-related information for use in service to the Church.